It is very hard for me to put into words what it means to have lost my entire family. I lost the ability to watch Tylee and JJ grow up. I lost my relationship with my little brother, which took years to build.

It took years to build to even have him be able to look us in the eyes. I lost the ability... [choking up] sit with my little sister and talk and share our lives. So in short, I lost everything I've ever known. I lost the ability to share my children with them or have my children have the privilege to know them and be loved by them. My three kids will never know the kindness of Tylee's heart or JJ's silly and goofy personality.

But more importantly, Tylee and JJ lost their lives. Tylee will never be able to travel like she always wanted to or have a family of her own or find herself in this world. JJ will never be able to spread his love or his light around the world the way he used to.

The only way I could describe the impact of their lives being lost is like a nuclear bomb Dropping. Tylee will never be able to share her gifts with the world or have all the people who love her get to hear her incredible laugh. JJ will never get to grow up and share his one of a kind personality with the world and everyone who's lost him feels a void.

It's not an overstatement to say that I lost everything. But more importantly, we all lost Tylee and JJ. I stand here today motherless, fatherless, sisterless, and brotherless. The only course forward is to trust in Christ, knowing that he has them in his arms, and wait for the day that we all meet again. I pray for all of you who have bleeding hearts.

Thank you.
