BAD REICHENHALL

Allergies? Pneumonia? Bronchitis? Rheumatism? Female ailments?

The cure awaits you in Bad Reichenhall, six miles southwest of Salzburg, Austria, and 10 miles north of Berchtesgaden, Germany.

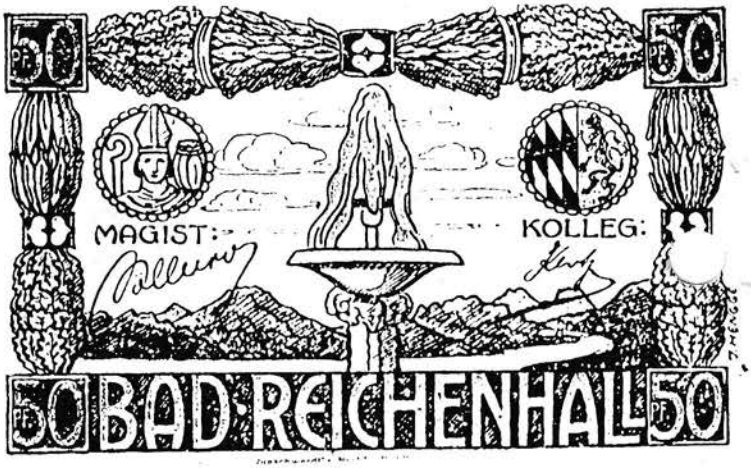

One flops in front of a salt water fountain for half an hour daily, covering oneself with therapeutic mud, inhaling salty fumes. Wealthy for its store of "white gold," known elsewhere as salt, one does not come to the village of 14,500 population without funds. Hotels are expensive and youth hostels nonexistent.

But the town dates from 1159; in 1507 springs were tapped, and the brine was used in the production of salt. Therapeutic purposes were explored in the 18th century and treatment facilities established in 1846. Spa recognition was given in 1890.

Hills frame the town, which lies along the Saalach River. The Saalach flows into the Salzach River just south of Salzburg. Both rivers form within 25 miles of one another in the Kitzbuehler Alps. South of Bad Reichenhall is the Predigtshuhl, 1,613 meters, accessible by the oldest tram in the world.

°+°+°+

Points of interest in Bad Reichenhall include the Salt Museum, called the Alte Saline; the Glashuette, where glass can be observed as it is formed; music, chess and the spa garden can be enjoyed in the Kurgarten.

The modern salt processing plant can be observed in operation, as huge pumps suck the water from underground springs and begin the transformation to salt.

It is healthful to walk along the Gradierwerk, termed an open-air inhalatorium, built in 1869. Salty water trickles over a tall structure holding sticks and briars.

North of Bad Reichenhall is St. Zeno, a cloister built by Charlemagne.

Typical Bavarian dishes to whet the appetite include Weisswurst, the large white sausages, often devoured as mid-morning snacks, which prepare one for lunch.

Accommodations can be found in the Steigenberger-Hotel Axelmannstein, Kurhotel Luisenbad; Panorama; Bayerischer Hof; Kurhotel Alpina; Tiroler Hof; Salzburger Hof; Deutsches Haus; and the Alpenhotel Fuchs on Thumsee.

Paper Notgeld issued by Bad Reichenhall and described by Albert Pick in "Das Papiergeld Bayerns" includes:

A comment about offerings of several books in a single lot. It is difficult to evaluate a single book in such a lot. We believe that most readers would agree that if persons were willing to pay the sale prices, those items are not worth less, so a floor is established.

All of the books listed above are out of print, some for 73 years or more.

And a final remark about those who specialize in books. Did you ever hear of a library being stolen?

* * *

More mushroom Notgeld has been picked by Canadian Bob Chaput, further to his remarks in the December 1994 issue of THE FRAKTUR.

Chaput now reports from Bevern, two sets of 25, 50 and 75 Pfennig, dated Dec. 31, 1921, with all six depicting mushrooms.

From Prisdorf are mushrooms found on the 25, 50 and 75 Pfennig notes.

Readers encountering mushrooms on notes not listed by Chaput are encouraged to write to Bob Chaput, 30 Lakeshore, Apt. 206, Pointe-Claire, Quebec, Canada H9S 4H2, or to THE FRAKTUR.
